

Avoidance & Approach Planner

Notice the pattern

Choose one situation. Notice what avoidance does now and over time.

Situation I have been avoiding:

What makes this difficult?

What am I predicting?

What thoughts are getting in the way?

What parts are possible to change?

What does avoiding it help with right now?

Avoidance & Approach Planner

Choose an approach

Respect real safety, consent, legal limits, health needs, and accessibility supports.

What does avoidance cost over time?

What would I like to be able to do?

A successful-enough outcome would look like:

One small, safe approach step:

What could help me try it?

When and where could I practise?

Avoidance & Approach Planner

After trying

Review both action and feeling. Anxiety does not have to decrease for practice to be useful.

Date and situation:

What did I do?

What happened?

How did I feel?

What did I cope with or learn?

What is the next useful step?
