

Exercise 1: Check the Facts

It is hard to problem-solve an emotional situation if we do not have our facts straight. You must know what the problem is before you can solve it. Use this worksheet below to determine if it is the event, your interpretation of the event or both that is causing your emotional response.

What is the EMOTION I want to change?

What is the PROMPTING EVENT for my emotional reaction?

What are my INTERPRETATIONS (thoughts, beliefs, etc.) about the facts?

What are the FACTS? (Write down what actually happened, not your interpretation, thoughts or emotions)

How do the facts differ from my interpretations, thoughts and emotions around this situation?

Does my emotion (or its intensity or duration) FIT THE FACTS?
